

The Silver Heirs

A New Fangled Old-Fashioned Radio Show

Starring Steven and Darla Mittler

as

Sam and Sadie Silver

Darla Mittler as Sadie Silver

Darla is no stranger to the stage. Whenever she sees one she knows exactly what it is.

Darla appeared as Joo-Joo Miller in the comedy play A Young Man's Fancy. Darla's performance included a solo number on the flute

Steven Mittler as Sam Silver

Steven started performing comedy on stage in 1974. He went on to give award-winning speeches. Later he worked for over a decade and a half in radio. Now Steven does independent voice work and comedy writing.

Sadie Silver

Sassy, savvy Sadie Silver. Sadie left the small town of her childhood to pursue her career as a photojournalist. Success followed Sadie wherever she went. Until she met Sam.

Sam Silver

Sam Silver is an idea man. Sam keeps his brains under his hat, where no one has ever seen them. The Silver family has amassed a great fortune. Sam has never seen any of it.

The Silver Heirs

Two shows to delight audiences

The Silver Heirs: The Radio Show

Sadie and Sam Silver star in the long-running (it's about an hour per show, that's long-running - I mean, if it were on television you'd get 22 minutes, tops, for a comedy - even stand-up comedians only do an average of 10 minutes these days) radio comedy The Silver Heirs.

When Sadie and Sam Silver inherit Sam's uncle's old homestead they find themselves in a town that runs on a schedule unlike the rest of the world.

In the rusted - uh - rustic town of Petunia, time hasn't just stopped, it's gone backwards.

The Silver Heirs is a new-fangled old-fashioned radio comedy. It's modeled after the radio comedy shows from generations ago and is suitable for all generations.

The Silver Heirs: The Live Show

Sadie and Sam's public appearances differ from their radio show by getting the audience involved, (the orchestra and sound effects guys just don't travel well).

Audiences can expect to be given lines of dialogue to read and sound effects props to have fun with.

It's an engaging time with fun for all generations!
